It's difficult to write in just one genre, so how do authors write in several? Find out on Tuesday, September 27.

What: Multi-Genre Writing, How do They do That? Mollie Bork is working with our guests to present an educational and entertaining program in our usual low-key, interactive format.

Story & Song, Amelia Park

Who: George Weinstein and Julia McDermott, moderated by Mollie Bork (published as Mollie Pilling)

George Weinstein will share perspectives of writing in diverse styles. Southern historical fiction and multicultural historical fiction are two of his genres, along with modern romance, mystery and suspense thriller.

George is Executive Director of the Atlanta Writers Club and Director of the Atlanta Writers Conference.

When he was about six years old, George wrote a collection of super hero plays for his stuffed animals to entertain his brother and sister. We'll have to ask him if he still has those plays, and the stuffed animals, too. <http://www.georgeweinstein.com>

Since moving here, Julia has found island life to be an inviting atmosphere for from Atlanta. She participates in the Amelia Island Writers Memoirs and Works in Progress focus groups.

Like George, Julia discovered writing as a child, delighting classmates with her stories. Julia is published in fiction, nonfiction, psychological suspense, and short stories. Both she and George have contributed to anthologies.

"That old September feeling, left over from school days, of summer passing, vacation nearly done, obligations gathering, books and football in the air...Another fall, another turned page: there was something of jubilee in that annual autumnal beginning, as if last year's mistakes had been wiped clean by summer." - Wallace Stegner, National Book Award and Pulitzer Prize Winning Author
